

Possible Areas for an Initial Borehole – For Discussion With Community

South Bruce is one of several communities involved in the site selection process for a deep geological repository for Canada's used nuclear fuel. The next site evaluation activity in South Bruce involves drilling an initial borehole on municipal land to further explore regional geology. This initial borehole is for research purposes only and is not expected to be a possible repository site.

