Directors asked questions about mortality tables; what level of surplus is usually required to take on a derivatives de-risking strategy; how would rates of return be impacted; would the discount rate be impacted; what are the clear benefits to a derivatives strategy and what would be the expected fees. In response to the question regarding fees, it was confirmed that derivative costs including manager's fees, trading costs, and the interest cost are about 2% in total.

A Director asked if one company would have the contract for all of the drilling in crystalline rock. Mr. Wilson noted that the lead contractor would be constant but that sub-contractors may differ.

Both Derek Wilson and Michael Hung discussed the staged approach to NWMO's strategy for accommodating fuel wastes from Small Modular Reactors (SMR's). Mr. Wilson discussed the state of SMR development in Canada, NWMO's roles and responsibilities and various cost models that could be considered.
